1. The best time to visit Pakistan varies by region. For northern areas like Hunza, Skardu, and Gilgit, April to October is ideal due to mild weather and clear roads. Southern regions like Karachi, Lahore, and Islamabad are best visited in winter from November to March to avoid extreme heat. Monsoon season in July and August can make northern areas risky, so planning accordingly ensures comfort and safety. Each season offers unique experiences, from lush green valleys in summer to snow-covered peaks in winter, making Pakistan a year-round destination depending on the traveler's preferences.

Using registered tour operators, trusted guides, and hotel-recommended transportation significantly reduces risks.
